5. Generate starting equipment

Each character starts with a dagger, backpack, flint-and-tinder, torch and bedroll. Additionally, clerics have a wooden holy symbol; thieves, lockpicks and tools; wizards, a spellbook. If an entry on the class table indicates a item would be possessed in character creation; e.g. poisoner for Goblins and poison, field armourer for Fighters and a smith hammer; then the character also starts with that item. If you wish to use random background generation for the characters, this can also be used to identify certain class-relevant items they begin with – see the table below. They also have randomly determined equipment based on the following table, and their CHA score in starting gold or silver depending on the currency standard you are using.

To generate the equipment, roll 1d20 on the table below, note down the gear and continue rolling until the same result comes up twice. If armour or a shield is rolled as a result, this can be substituted for a form usable by the class of the PC e.g. a thief can substitute Heavy armour for Light (see below). Once an armour or shield result is rolled, all subsequent rolls use 1d10+10. Rolling any entry twice ends the equipment generation. Note: characters can only ever carry up to their strength score in bulky items, such as armour, rope or a ladder.

| 11 | Knocked prone | | |

-1 for each subsequent roll on this table after the first without rest or healing
 -4 to the roll if unconscious, unaware or bound. Apply DEX mod to falling roll
 ↑
 The number of d6 rolled for a sneak attack is likewise subtracted

A bonus to the roll can be applied equal to the armour rating of the area of the body hit or a shield, if carried. Armour that thus obstructs a telling blow is damaged and offers one less bonus to AC for the struck body part and future rolls on this chart. Magical armour offers the bonus but is not otherwise damaged, unless struck by unusually powerful weapons or creatures.

To determine hit location and interpret effect roll 1d6 and allocate to body part as follows:

- | | |
|-----------|-----------|
| 1. Head | 4. Torso |
| 2. L. Arm | 5. L. Leg |
| 3. R. Arm | 6. R. Leg |
