Description

The Chimpanzees are the warrior race of the Great Apes of this world. While some may farm, you’ll find that most Chimps are in business, trade, and many leadership roles. Not to mention, as warriors.

Amongst the Mayan Apes, Chimps make up most of the warrior caste, and run most of the businesses and trade houses. You’ll find more Chimp merchants cutting deals than any other Ape. But, they don’t like those who falsely deal with them. Chimps have a code of honor that precludes outright lies. White lies, lies of omission, not fully divulging information... that’s okay.

Chimps lead the more bloodthirsty religions and relish in the Simian sacrifices to the various Mayan gods. When ask whether or not gods favor a military campaign, they invariably find that the gods are in favor.

Chimps lord over the Gorillas, and push them around. Every so often, they push a Gorilla a little too far and a Chimp gets hurt or killed. When that happens, Chimp retribution is always swift and merciless.

Orangutans are infuriating. Chimps cannot get rise out of them no matter how much you scream at them. They are slow, lazy, and in all levels of government. Getting them to do anything takes lots of bribes and kowtowing to their baser wants. Chimps do respect the fact that if you hurt an Orangutan’s family, he’ll pull your head off in retaliation.

Description

Gorillas are mild mannered for the most part, but will annoy you with their constant presence if they want something from you. They tend to live outside of big cities, preferring life in the country over the urban landscape. Those who do live in cities end up in enclaves where other Apes, humans included, are not welcomed.

City Gorillas tend to consider most property to be community property and will take items that are not secured. "Secured" in this case means in an iron chest with a massive lock and bolted to a stone floor.

Gorillas tend to lead the less bloodthirsty religions as priests. They are respected by all Apes for their wisdom and teachings. Unless, of course, it contradicts the desires of a local leader.

They tolerate the Chimps, and do what they say, because Chimps are scary when provoked. Still, every so often, a Chimp takes too many liberties with a Gorilla or their loved ones. Gorillas will defend their own.

Orangutans talk down to Gorillas and tend to treat them as imbeciles. Still, the best food and drink are in Orangutan taverns and homes. Having one as a friend makes up for the way he pats you on the head and over explains things.

Description

Orangutans to an ape, are lazy, work avoiding, Simians. They prefer to lounge about, than do an honest day's work. Thus, you'll find them working as teachers, bureaucrats, and in knowledge based jobs. Philosophy is a favorite career among the more educated Orangutans, since they can make stuff up that sounds profound and still get paid.

When encountering an Orangutan bureaucrat, expect to pay a lot in bribes to expedite any progress or access to higher levels of government.

Still, they are the researchers, and find discovering new knowledge and facts to be quite satisfying. Many of this world's discoveries were made by Orangutans, and many more are to come.

Orangutans will ignore Chimpanzees unless the Chimp gets into their face. Then they will patiently listen to him rant, and then tell him that they are on their lunch/cocoa break and come back later. It's nearly impossible to get an Orangutan to strike out... unless you hurt or threaten their family. Then hope you can run faster than they can.

Gorillas are considered to be less intelligent than Chimps, but easier going and better to work with. Still, they consider Gorilla's to be dense, and will carefully and slowly explain things to them.
