

Dear children,

Thank you so much for your help in awakening me from my magical slumber. I wanted to give you these gifts, in the hopes that you can use them in another adventure to do good for someone else.

First, I have given you one of the bells from Sleipnir's bridle. If you ever need transport, simply ring the bell, and Sleipnir will appear. Hang the bell on his bridle, and he will take you wherever you need to go. This will only work once.

Second, I have given you a potion made with honey and milk. I find that drinking it when it's hot can make you warm and comfortable no matter what the weather is.

Finally, I have given you a piece of honeycomb from my own Yule table. I find that eating honey in the comb fills you up with holiday spirit for a while, and I think that those around you can feel it too.

I thank you again for your kindness towards me, and I hope that our paths will cross in the future.

Sincerely,
Odin
