SEASON OF THE SHACKLES

Some pirates choose to become scurvy scum, but some are merely heroes who've strayed a bit off course. You could have chosen to live among honest, reputable folk, but through misadventure, you've drifted into the Shackles, a chain of islands off the western coast of Garund, just south of an eternal hurricane called the Eye of Abendego. Power and privilege increase your chances of survival here, so you'll want to gain a ship of your own, recruit a crew you can trust, and seize enough ships to form a fleet. If you're gonna stay here, there's no better path to power than claiming a seat on the Pirate Council. Through courage, conquest, exploration, and a little bit of skullduggery, you'll prove to the council you're dangerous enough to rule beside them... because if they don't, your armada is going to blast their ships to the briny deep. Survive the Shackles, and one day, you could be worthy of setting sail with the Hurricane King himself.

COMPLETE THESE ADVENTURES IN ANY ORDER:

1	Lost at Sea
2	A Pirate's Life
3	Treacherous Waters
4	Island of the Damned
5	Run Out the Guns
6	Hurricane Weather

DURING THIS ADVENTURE PATH

After completing Treacherous Waters, at the beginning of each new adventure, when you add a new Adventure Deck to your game box, remove all cards with the Basic or Elite trait that have adventure deck numbers at least 3 less than the adventure deck you just added. (Treat the set indicators B, C, and P as 0.) Do not remove Blessings of the Gods.

Cartography by Rob Lazzaretti

REWARD

Each player chooses 1 of his Pathfinder Society Adventure Card Guild characters. That character may treat the loot Councilor's Ring as if it is in his Class Deck box.

HURRICANE WEATHER

This Adventure Requires:

- The Pathfinder Adventure Card Game: Skull & Shackles Base Set, including The Wormwood Mutiny Adventure Deck,
- the Raiders of the Fever Sea Adventure Deck,
- the Tempest Rising Adventure Deck,
- the Island of Empty Eyes Adventure Deck,
- The Price of Infamy Adventure Deck, and
- the From Hell's Heart Adventure Deck.
- If you have 5 or 6 players, the Pathfinder Adventure Card Game: Skull & Shackles Character Add-On Deck is also required.

During this adventure, the game box should include only cards with set indicators of B, C, P, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6.

COMPLETE THESE SCENARIOS IN ANY ORDER:

- 0-6A: Get a Clue
- 0-6B: The Battle of Abendego
- 0-6C: The Monster Marsh
- 0-6D: The Pirate Party
- 0-6E: Into the Maelstrom
- 0-6F: Lost in the Storm

Read the Following Aloud:

You've made powerful friends while sailing around the Shackles—and apparently, at least one very powerful enemy. Although you ultimately defeated Her, you and your crew still have hazy memories about precisely how that all happened. You remember waking up when it was all over, and the memory of a cryptic symbol carved into your forehead stands out, but everything that happened after the fight started is a blur. Actually, some of the moments before the fight started are also a bit vague.

You can't even remember who She was... although She clearly wanted to get into your mind... and of course, there were the bugs... the bugs... so many bugs... SHE knew every thought in your head, and SHE searched for a way to seize control of your mind. Terrifying flashbacks often flood your consciousness with images of claws and fins and tentacles and teeth and... maybe it's best not to dwell on that. The nightmares are even worse. And every morning when you wake up feeling sick, that's not so great either.

The real question is: Why you? Maybe you've done something to draw Her attention. After all, the stories of your heroic exploits have been spreading through taverns all over the Shackles. You've got the support of many prominent figures on the Pirate Council, enough that you're almost ready to become one of them. Maybe SHE thinks you're a threat. Or perhaps SHE wants to control you. After all, you're the kind of hero who could eventually challenge the Pirate King himself! Or does She have someone else in mind? For all you know, She might already control the weaker minds on the Pirate Council. That's a sobering thought.

By rum and thunder, that shouldn't stop you! She tried, and She failed, and you survived! Whether you want to remember what happened or forget all of it, you've got to put an end to your nightmares. The best way to do that is to face your fears: chase down the entity responsible for your torment and sink it once and for all.

But first, you'll need to rest up for your next epic journey. It wouldn't hurt to have one more drink, would it? Perhaps one more jug of rum? Maybe it would actually help if you spent a little more time conversing with the councilors who pass through the tavern where you're staying. And after all, the inn above that tavern has such warm, comfortable feather beds. If you could just get one uninterrupted night of sleep, you'd be ready to set sail with your crew in the morning. A few more hours in bed, and you'll be right as rain...

REWARD

Each player unlocks the ability to play Enora from the Wrath of the Righteous Base Set with the Wizard Class Deck.

0-6A: GET A CLUE

Read the Following Aloud:

You wake up. Your fingers are clawing at your head. Are the bugs still there? You throw off the covers, making sure there are no insects in the sheets. The bugs are gone, and more importantly, SHE is gone. Her creatures are dead, and you survived.

It's been a month since She took over your ship, but the nightmares are getting worse. As you walk downstairs to the tavern, you look at your mates and see your own nerves and exhaustion reflected from their weary, haggard faces. Maybe it's the right time to leave the Shackles. Horrors like Her are not the sort of challenge that sane crewmen sign up for.

A bespectacled half-orc interrupts your musings. "The Hurricane King will see you now." He gestures to a curtained alcove. Behind the curtain sits Kerdak Bonefist, leader of the Pirate Council. He's sitting beside a woman whose dreadlocked hair looks as though it needs a thorough cleaning.

"Glad to see yer in one piece. I've heard about yer travels and yer troubles, and I've a mind to find out more. Alise has a story you'll want ta hear."

"Grogblud's the name," she says. "I was first mate on the Devilish Duchess until the fool cap'n tried to shoot the Gullet of Dagon's Jaws to escape a spot o' trouble. He didn't make it. Before the crew and I abandoned ship, I grabbed the captain's personal effects. One o' his notebooks had some ramblings about traitors on the council, so I turned it over to His Majesty here."

Bonefist leans forward. "In this journal, he's drawn yer symbol over and over, along with fragments of maps and words about bone relics. I charge ye to find these relics and see if they can tell us the tale of what's going on in my waters. You and yer crew should set sail with the tide."

DURING THIS SCENARIO

Treat the henchman Ruffian as if it is the deck 3 henchman Cryptic Runes.

Cut the prophecy handout into a number of pieces equal to the number of Cryptic Runes henchmen.

When you defeat a Cryptic Runes henchman, put that card in a henchman pile next to this scenario and get a piece of the prophecy handout.

When you encounter the villain Brinebones, you may shuffle it and a henchman from the henchman pile into a random open location to evade Brinebones.

REWARD

For the rest of the Adventure Path, when setting up each scenario, 1 character may temporarily replace an ally in her deck with the loot Alise Grogblud. At the end of each scenario, return the loot to the game box.

Development:

Well, that stung a bit, but you've gathered up most of the bone fragments. In addition to the symbol She bore, the bones hold some sort of coded writing. If you or the Hurricane King's advisors can decrypt it, you'll have some clue as to what to do next. You really don't want to see Her again—and the bugs, the bugs, so many bugs—but if you can't resolve the mystery of that cryptic symbol, you won't be getting much sleep. The nightmares will just get worse.

0-6B: THE BATTLE OF ABENDEGO

Read the Following Aloud:

“I don’t want to hear about old bones!” Barracuda Aiger slams his flintlock down on a pile of nautical charts, then starts pacing back and forth. A dozen or so pirate captains listen intently, barely fitting inside his cramped war room. “The Sodden Lands are far away from here. We’ve got a more immediate problem on our hands. We were right about that damned dirty double-crossing Harrigan. We’ve got a fleet of Chelish warships headed straight for us!”

“That’s impossible!” shouts one of the captains. “How did the Chelish get here so quickly? The Eye of Abendego should have delayed them for months!”

“That doesn’t matter,” the captain responds. “They’re here today! The Hurricane King refused to heed my warning, and now we’ve spotted Chelish sails on the horizon. If we can’t assemble a fleet to stop it, we’ll be slaves or fish food before ya can say ‘knife!’ I come to ya with my hat in hand and a fire in my eyes. We need ta fight together, or we’ll be torn apart. Are ya with me?”

The room is silent for one heartbeat, and then two, and then slowly fills with muttered conversations. Tessa Fairwind saunters over to you, the jaunty sway of her hips belied by the genuine fear in her eyes.

“These new folk are right. If we don’t fight together, we’ll lose to the Chelish for sure. I hear yer workin on something to do with nightmare monsters, but nightmares can only bother ye if yer alive. Will ye help us sink these devil-worshiping bastards?”

You nod. Captains cheer. The Battle of Abendego has begun.

THE PARTY DOES NOT HAVE A SHIP.

DURING THIS SCENARIO

When you would choose your party’s ship, each character instead randomly chooses a class 6 or lower ship and stashes a plunder card under it. On your turn, you are commanding your own ship. You are only on your ship, and you cannot move with another character when she moves during her move step. When your ship is dealt Structural damage, only you can reduce damage to your ship.

The difficulty to defeat ships is increased by the number of open locations.

If your ship is wrecked at the end of your move step, put it in a defeated pile next to the scenario and choose another ship from the box to be your ship. If there are more ships in the defeated pile than the number of characters, you lose the scenario.

To win the scenario, close all locations.

When you earn a deck upgrade from this scenario, you may choose from either your own plunder or the party’s acquired cards.

REWARD

Each character chooses weapon or spell and draws a card of that type from the box.

Development:

What a battle! While you were devastating a squadron of Chelish vessels, another captain aimed her ship straight at Admiral Throne herself... and emerged victorious! Seems like the winds are changing. Before long, there might be a change in leadership as well. The Hurricane King could have a rival soon. You’ve got other matters on your mind. Now that the armada’s been defeated, you can return to tracking down the giants mentioned on the bone fragments. The mystery continues!

0-6C: THE MONSTER MARSH

Read the Following Aloud:

After piecing together an ancient letter, you set course for an ancient area of the Sodden Lands, where the inhabitants of a once-great kingdom of giants devolved into savagery. Brineborn giants still dwell in ruins, guarding secrets of ages long gone.

As you trudge across the shore, the ground shakes beneath your feet. You'll have to move quickly. Primitive tribes preserve the lore of many ancient cults and religions, including secrets about... HER... the entity who has brought you such torment. The leader of these aquatic marsh giants might know more.

You'd probably find it easier to cope if you could give HER a name. As you run from the patrolling giants into the crumbling ruins, your notice strange sigils adorning worn surfaces. They bear a fearful resemblance to the cryptic mark you saw carved in your forehead. A name rises to the periphery of your mind.

SHE is the Shrouded Queen... and these brineborn giants are her loyal servitors. Trouble doesn't get much bigger than this.

REWARD

For the rest of the Adventure Path, when setting up each scenario, 1 character may temporarily replace a weapon in her deck with the loot Scoundrel's Sword Cane and another character may temporarily replace a weapon in his deck with the loot Crossbow of Retribution. At the end of each scenario, return the loot to the game box.

Development:

The giants' ruler, Mugslup, has been beaten and broken. "SHE watches us," he intones, "yet serves another. HIS realm is a whirlwind of destruction and chaos near the outer edge of the Great Hurricane. No one dares to stare into the storm, where HE thrives in the chaos and madness. Only a fool would seek HIM!"

Okay, so maybe you're a little foolish, but the nightmares won't stop until you face your fears. As you prepare to set a course deeper into the Shackles' eternal hurricane, a scout in the crow's nest announces that a ship is approaching. It's the Hurricane King! Perhaps you won't have to face these horrors alone...

0-6D: THE PIRATE PARTY

Read the Following Aloud:

As you were charting a course past the fringe of the Shackles' eternal hurricane, you were startled by the arrival of the Hurricane King's ship. The crew signaled for you to come aboard. The winds are fierce this close to the hurricane, but with a bit of planning, you cast off ropes towards the Hurricane King's ship.

The ship's captain isn't here to greet you. Neither is the boatswain or the first mate. The surly crew watches you warily.

What's that scurrying across the deck? Is there something else here? Are there many things here? As your breath catches in your throat, you realize that it's the bugs. The bugs, the bugs, the bugs that got in your hair and in your skull and your mind and they all serve HER. Terror seizes you as the crew lunges towards you, grabbing for boarding pikes and any weapons that lie at hand. You can no longer trust the crew that once served Hurricane King—the Shrouded Queen has enlisted them for a far more sinister purpose.

Seems like you've become a little too infamous. Like any worthy pirate, you wanted to become a legend. Your tales have inspired an armada of captains to support you in your bid for the Pirate Council, but you've also made powerful enemies. The Shrouded Queen managed to suborn the Hurricane King's ship and crew, but you were made of sterner stuff. She captured you, but could never control you. Now it's clear that She intends to destroy you. Leering with malevolent intent, her minions advance.

REWARD

Each character chooses item or armor and draws a card of that type from the box.

Development:

There's no sign of Kerdak Bonefist on this ship, but plenty of sailors are now unconscious on the deck. Each time one of them fell, a little swarm of insects scurried belowdecks. You can still find bugs hidden in the clothes and pockets and the hair of the swabs you've beaten into submission. Now that you've won the day, a few survivors are cowering before you, looking as confused and dazed as you did the day after you woke up from your battle with... HER. They've heard the distant call of the one who commands the Shrouded Queen. If you can show your captives a little sympathy, maybe these remorseful sailors can help you chart a course towards HIS sanctum in the storm. A far more ancient nemesis awaits you...

0-6E: INTO THE MAELSTROM

Read the Following Aloud:

Winds scream as your ship descends into the maelstrom. Dark skies blot out the sun. At best, your course is an educated guess. You know you're drawing closer to your destination, not only because of your skill as a sailor, but because of the growing sense of dread from the crewmen you've captured.

If you were a cynic, you'd think the storm itself was working to foil your plans. As you approach your fearful destination, the storm gets worse. Nervous crewmen hold onto the ship while lumbering across the deck. Whenever a crewman stands in place for more than a moment, he lashes himself to anything sturdy.

The rigging whips back and forth; the sails are on the verge of being torn to shreds; the crew appears crazed and desperate. Some frantically look for anything they can repair, for you're as concerned about containing the damage as anything else. Few would attempt a voyage as dangerous as this, but you know that if you can't confront your fears, your nightmares will be worse.

As the heavens rage, a wizened sailor stands on the forecandle of your ship, staring out into the tempest. "A shadow lies over these waters," he proclaims. "The Shadow in the Seas... a force more powerful and ancient than the Shrouded Queen." You slowly approach the old salt, fearing what he might reveal. "He takes many forms in this world," he continues, "and He has many names... but He has one that men dare not speak..."

With a trembling hand, he gestures towards the storm, "We seek His sanctum... for HE is an avatar of DAGON!" At the mention of His name, the waves tower over you. Lightning dances in the heavens. The fury of a tempest surrounds you. Your chances of survival have just dramatically decreased.

Development:

Your wayfinder is useless. No map can offer counsel. No star can guide you. You've done the best you can, but your navigator has given up all hope. Acting on no more than a hunch, you carry on until even the light forsakes you. Darkness inexorably envelops every source of illumination you carry, swallowing them in shadows. For a heartbeat, you consider changing course and turning back, but the decision is no longer yours. The currents shift, swiftly changing your course as your ship picks up speed. You sense it already: a vortex is engulfing your ship as you descend into darkness and terror...

A ship’s rigging is the system of ropes or chains used to support the masts and sails that propel the vessel forward. Rigging comes in two main types: standing rigging, which runs between masts and decks to prevent masts from falling, and running rigging, which allows for mastery of the ship’s sails by running from the sails to control points around the vessel.

GALLEY

All ships large enough to carry a crew have a galley, the nautical term for a kitchen. Most galleys contain rudimentary cooking facilities that are bolted down and use very little open flame. Crews vie for space on ships whose captains are wealthy enough to provide magical heat sources for their galleys, because the better the grub, the easier the job.

0-6F: LOST IN THE STORM

Read the Following Aloud:

You can no longer control your ship. It careens madly at an angle, soaring along a wall of water. Deadly whirlpools lead deeper into darkness. The heavens are obscured, the light is fading, and all hope is gone. Inexorable as death itself, the swift currents drag you downward as the tortuous waters swallow your ship whole.

Madness seizes your crew. While a handful of heroes prepare themselves to meet with eternity, weaker souls abandon all reason, screaming so loudly that even the storm cannot drown out their cries of terror. Babbling, gibbering, pleading to all the gods you know—and a few you do not—their minds surrender to the inevitable, cast adrift from sanity.

The few brave souls who can endure this creeping madness stand with their weapons ready. All eyes are cast down into the depths, where something approximating dry land—if such a phenomenon is even possible here—waits for you within the vortex. The creatures that defend it have no need for sanity or reason. Their twisted bodies serve as a mockery of conventional anatomy. They walk like men, like crabs, like insects, like tangled masses of tentacles and fins and teeth and appendages that defy all effort at description. An entourage of karkinoi—half-ogre, half-crab, all murderous—commands the teeming throng.

The Shadow in the Sea has assembled His boarding party, and at any moment, your ship will be dashed to pieces on the slippery surface that sustains these creatures' obscene bulk. You hear the wood of your ship begin to crack as it tears asunder, its portions drifting apart... and as the remaining survivors scream, the winds of the whirlpool and the madness of the maelstrom convey blasphemous creatures towards the remaining fragments of your ship.

Darkness surrounds you. The ship falls further apart. You must fight or die.

CHOOSE ANY CLASS 6 OR LOWER SHIP AS YOUR SHIP.
YOUR SHIP IS ANCHORED AT LOST IN THE STORM.

DURING THIS SCENARIO

Treat the villain Jemma Redclaw as if it is the villain Avatar of Dagon, and the henchman Ruffian as if it is the henchman Karkinoi. Treat the adventure deck number of this scenario as 7.

This scenario has no blessings deck. When adding henchman, shuffle a number of henchman equal to the number of characters into the location deck.

Display each villain listed on any character's Chronicle sheet from Scenario 0-6D: The Pirate Party next to the scenario. Any character may banish one of them to reduce damage dealt to that character by 6, to add 1 die to any check attempted by that character, or to explore that character's location.

REWARD

For the rest of the Adventure Path, when setting up each scenario, you may temporarily replace a card in your deck with a loot card of the same type. At the end of each scenario, return the loot to the game box.

Development:

You are alive. You open your eyes and the sun gazes back at you. Although you and the few survivors of your voyage are clinging to the wreckage of your ship, the currents have carried you out of the Eye of Abendego. You have no idea how long you were holding on for dear life, but time begins to resume its normal pace as you watch a ship majestically approach. Cheers erupt from those gathered along its gunwales: the captains of the Pirate Council who have pledged to support you.

No sailor has ever ventured so far into the Eye of Abendego and lived to tell the tale. Your story ends with triumph over an avatar of Dagon. It's a legend worthy of your greatest aspiration: it proves you're finally ready for a seat on the Pirate Council.

You're hauled onto Kerdak Bonefist's deck, where he rewards you with your councilor's ring. More adventures await over the horizon. For now, you're content to sail away on calmer waters.

SKULL & SHACKLES LOCATION 6

LOST IN THE STORM

You have no idea where you are. This storm has been raging for what seems like an eternity. You've looked to the stars for guidance, but the skies are growing darker with each passing hour. Gray clouds blot out the sun, and your sources of illumination are gradually fading, much like your chances of survival. No compass or wayfinder can show you a path to safety, and your nautical charts are useless. When will this madness end?

POWERS

The difficulty to defeat is increased by the adventure deck number of the current scenario.

If the Karkinoi would be defeated, reroll the dice. The Karkinoi is defeated or undefeated based solely on the result of the new die roll.

If the check to defeat does not include the Attack trait, after you act, the Karkinoi deals 2 Combat damage to you.

If defeated, you may immediately attempt to close the location this henchman came from.
