Introduction

Some of my earliest roleplaying days were spent with the first iteration of Lord Korbok, who was a Dwarf. That's it. Just a Dwarf. It was both his race and his class. He changed as we changed games, becoming, for example, a dwarf fighter/thief in AD&D and the leader of a superhero team in TSR's excellent Marvel Super Heroes Roleplaying Game. I've long liked the idea that only humans had classes. Other races, referred to as demi-humans in some books, didn't have classes. They just were, and with experience they got better at being what they were.

And so, Demi-Human Adventurers, which brings race-as-class options for you to use with your Swords & Wizardry: WhiteBox games. Enjoy, and, as always, if you have any questions or comments, let me know.

Dwarf

Dwarves, crafted by the Forge Lord, typically inhabit mountains and rugged hills, where they build fortress-towns that include subterranean passages, chambers, and clever mechanical defenses. Outsiders often characterize Dwarves as short and stocky defenders of mountain fortresses, stern and humorless. Known for mining the earth's treasures and crafting magnificent items from ore and gemstones, Dwarves have an unrivaled affinity for the bounties of the deep earth. They love history and tradition, and they often view shifts in attitudes, styles, fashions, and trends with suspicion if not hostility. Dwarves believe unbroken things don't need to be fixed, and broken things should be repaired rather than replaced.

Dwarves are a short and stocky race, standing about a foot shorter than the average human. Dwarves have wide, compact bodies that account for their burly appearance. Male and female Dwarves pride themselves on the long length of their hair, and men often decorate their beards with a variety of clasps and intricate braids. A clean-shaven male Dwarf is surely mad or cursed; one trusts a beardless Dwarven male with great caution.

Dwarven Class Abilities

Establish Mountain Hall: At tenth level, a Dwarf who chooses to build and dedicate a mountain hall to his clan may attract a body of loyal followers who swear fealty to the character.

Experience Bonus for Constitution: Constitution is the Prime Attribute for Dwarves, which means a Dwarf with Constitution of 15 or higher receives an additional 5% experience.

Forged in Fire: The Forge Lord crafted the first Dwarves with fire, hammer, and anvil, and some of the magic from that divine act remains within every Dwarf. When a Dwarf suffers damage from a metal weapon or from fire, the player rolls a Forged in Fire die. If the die result is a 1 or a 2, the die type downgrades one step (d10 to d8, d8 to d6, et cetera). A d4 that downgrades means this ability no longer functions until it has recovered, which requires a day of uninterrupted rest. Regardless of the Forged in Fire die result, the Dwarf takes half damage from the metal weapon or fire.

Keen Detection: Dwarves are good at spotting construction, traps, and slanting passages while underground. See the adjacent table for the chance of success.

Saving Throws: Dwarves are hearty creatures. They gain a +4 bonus on saving throws against poison.

Weapon and Armor Restrictions: Like Fighters, Dwarves train in warfare and have no restrictions on the weapons or armor they may use. A Dwarf makes attack rolls as a Fighter of equal level.

Elf

Centuries ago, Elves ruled the world through sorcerous might and military power. Now, the Elven hegemony exists largely in history books. Few Elven cities still exist as functioning political bodies. The rest of former Elven possessions and vassals have either been overtaken by wilderness or else exist today long-free of Elven overlords. The Elves were created by the Sun King and the Moon Queen, the two chief Elven gods, deities of the sun and moon, of life and death. The Moon Queen fashioned the Elven body while the Sun King infused the spark of life. The duality of their creators affects the very core of Elven existence for every Elf is both male and female, changing sex with the passing of the hours.

Most Elves are amoral. Tradition and the search for pleasure and new sensations dominate their actions. Elven sophisticates take pride in their love of cruelty and pleasure. The worst manifestations of their self-centered ways are held in check by rigid adherence to tradition. Elaborate rituals dedicated to the sun and the moon dominate Elven society, and few Elves have the courage to ignore these rites.

Elves are tall and move with grace. They have slender builds, long limbs, and elegant features including prominent cheekbones, pointed ears, and large eyes. Elven hair grows straight, tending toward light shades of brown, blonde, or auburn. Elves do not grow beards or mustaches.

Elven Class Abilities

Duality: All Elves are both male and female, both martial (makar) and magical (istar). At 1st level, the player must decide which sex corresponds with which adjective. Thus, an Elf can be a magical male and a martial female, or vice versa. At moonrise each day, an Elf's sex changes. An Elf can attempt to resist this change by making a saving throw. When an Elf changes form, the Elf recovers 1d6 lost hit points.

Establish Stronghold: At tenth level, an Elf who chooses to build a stronghold may attract a body of loyal followers who swear fealty to the character.

Experience Bonus for Strength and Intelligence: Strength and Intelligence are the Prime Attributes for Elves. An Elf with a Strength of 15 or higher receives a 2.5% bonus to experience. An Elf with a 15 or higher in Intelligence receives an additional 2.5% experience. These bonuses are cumulative for an Elf with 15+ in both attributes.

Keen Detection: Elves are good at spotting hidden and concealed doors (1-4 on a d6 when searching or 1-2 on a d6 if just passing by).

Saving Throws: An Elf receives a +2 bonus on saving throws against the special attacks of the undead.

Weapon and Armor Restrictions: An Elf in either form can wear any armor up to and including chain mail. The Elf cannot use two-handed weapons or shields while casting spells.

Elven Istar Abilities

Combat: In istar form, an Elf resolves attack rolls using the same table as Magic-Users, but enjoys a +1 bonus to-hit with any type of bow or one-handed sword.

Saving Throws: An Elf in istar form receives a +2 bonus on saving throws against charm and sleep.

Spellcasting: Like the Magic-User, an Elf owns a book of spells, which does not necessarily include all of the spells on the standard lists. Reading from this book, the Elf presses select spell formulae into the mind, thus “preparing” those spells to be cast. Once a prepared spell is cast, the spell formulae disappears from the Elf’s mind, and must be prepared again before another attempt can be made to cast it. However, it is possible to prepare a spell multiple times using the available “slots” in the Elf’s memory. If the Elf finds spell scrolls during an adventure, those can be copied into the spellbook.

Elven Makar Abilities

Combat: In makar form, an Elf resolves attack rolls using the same table as Clerics, but enjoys a +1 bonus to-hit with any type of bow or one-handed sword.

Saving Throws: An Elf in makar form receives a +2 bonus on saving throws against fear and sleep.

Gnome

Gnomes, seldom seen above ground during the day, dwell mostly deep within the earth, within caverns and tunnels carved by forces both natural and unnatural. In their subterranean world, lit only by magic, fire, or the enormous caps of giant phosphorescent mushrooms, Gnomes live in small communities most often ruled by jarl, a chief chosen from among the families of the tribe. War-like and territorial, Gnomes guard their cavern-halls against the predations of monsters, especially the cruel and cowardly kobolds.

The Gnomish god of caverns and music sang the first Gnomes into existence, shaping clay into living creatures by the power of his voice. His brother, the deity of deceit and riddles, taught the Gnomes the arts of illusion and stealth, while the Gnomish god of victory taught them the arts of war. Gnomes are a secretive race who often have flexible notions about the importance of honesty, especially when dealing with those who are not Gnomes.

Gnomes seldom stand more than a yard tall when fully grown. They have squat, pudgy torsos, and their arms and legs appear long and thin in contrast. Male Gnomes usually have neatly trimmed beards and gray or white hair, for this race's hair gives the appearance of advanced age even in young male adults.

Gnome Advancement Table

Level	Exp. Points	Hit Dice (d6)	Saving Throw
1	0	1	15
2	1,625	2	14
3	3,250	2+1	13
4	6,500	3	12
5	13,000	4	11
6	26,000	4+1	10

8	104,000	6	8
9	208,000	6+1	7
10	416,000	7	6

Female Gnomes do not have facial hair, nor does their hair prematurely gray. Talk of Gnomes having prominent noses is greatly exaggerated, according to Gnomes at least, who say they have small faces instead.

Gnomish Class Abilities

Establish Cavern Hall: At tenth level, a Gnome who chooses to build and dedicate a cavern hall to his clan may attract a body of loyal followers who swear fealty to the character.

Experience Bonus for Intelligence: Intelligence is the Prime Attribute for Gnome, which means a Gnome with Intelligence of 15 or higher receives an additional 5% experience.

Infravision: Gnomes have infravision in addition to normal sight and can see 60' in the dark. Infravision is the ability to see heat (and the lack of heat). Normal and magical light makes infravision useless.

Keen Detection: Gnomes are good at spotting unsafe cave features, slanting passages, and depth underground, as well as determining direction underground. See the adjacent table for the chance of success.

Saving Throws: Gnomes are preternaturally alert. They gain a +2 bonus on saving throws versus illusions and traps. Also, when surprised, a Gnome may attempt a saving throw. If successful, he isn't surprised after all.

Shadows and Stealth: Gnomes possess natural stealth and an affinity for illusion magic. Once per day, a Gnome may use either Invisibility or Phantasmal Force, both of which duplicate the spells of the same name except that the duration is one round per level of the Gnome. Gnomes can move silently, avoid detection, and climb walls free-handed in much the same manner as a Thief. The Gnome's chances of doing so are shown on the adjacent table.

Speak with Animals: Gnomes can speak with burrowing animals within 30 feet. This ability is similar to the spell Speak with Animals.

Weapon and Armor Restrictions: Gnomes have no restrictions on weapons, but their small stature makes heavy and two-handed weapons problematic. Gnomes may use any small-sized weapons (such as a dagger, short sword, or short bow), but may not use two-handed swords, longbows, battle axes, pole arms, or other large weapons. Gnomes may wear only leather armor. Gnomes resolves attacks using the same table as Clerics.

Halfling

The Halflings, so-called because they resemble humans in most ways except height and toughness of foot, are not a numerous race, but they have an ancient pedigree. Indeed, the Halflings claim they were the first race created by the true god, whom they call Mnorh, which means "Illumination" in Trgovija, the Halfling tongue. Halfling scholars disagree on whether Mnorh created the other races, or whether Mnorh created the gods who created the other races, but either way the message remains the same: Mnorh is supreme.

Most Halflings live semi-nomadic lives, establishing temporary settlements in fertile lands to graze their sheep and farm for a season before moving on. They are prolific traders, and those Halflings that reside in towns almost always seem to be engaged in business of some sort. Scrupulous and industrious, Halflings would be more trusted and liked if not for their religious beliefs, which many peoples view as insulting, even dangerous. Spates of terrible violence aimed at Halflings punctuate their history, and Halflings have developed a strong warrior tradition in response to the not infrequent threats to their way of life.

Halflings appear very much like Humans, but at about half the size. They tend to have curly hair, youthful features regardless of age, and over-sized feet on which grows abundant hair. Halflings usually go unshod, for the soles of their feet are thick and insensible to a wide range of temperatures and surfaces.

Halfling Class Abilities

Accuracy and Agility: Halflings receive a +2 attack bonus when firing missile weapons in combat. Halfling have special skill in fighting giants, ogres, and similar giant-type creatures such as trolls. Against Halflings, such monsters only inflict half the normal damage. Halflings possess natural agility and grace. They move quietly, climb and hide well, and can perform acrobatic feats. The chances to do so are shown on the adjacent table. Of course, a Halfling may not be able to perform such feats wearing certain types of armor or if carrying too much weight.

Establish Fort: At tenth level, a Halfling who chooses to build a fort may attract a body of loyal followers who swear fealty to the character.

Experience Bonus for Dexterity: Dexterity is the Prime Attribute for Halflings, which means a Halfling with Dexterity of 15 or higher receives an additional 5% experience.

Saving Throws: Halflings possess great resolve and courage, gaining a +2 bonus to saving throws against fear.

Weapon and Armor Restrictions: Halflings may wear any kind of armor and may use shields; however, their armor and shields must be specially made for their small size. Halflings may use any small-sized weapons (such as a dagger, short sword, or short bow). Halflings may not use two-handed swords, longbows, battle axes, pole arms, or other large weapons. Halflings resolve their attacks using the same table as Fighters.
